CITY OF JOPLIN, MISSOURI

1.0 SCOPE OF WORK

1.1 Purpose

The City of Joplin is interested in obtaining the services of a consulting firm to engage in a strategic planning process to outline the future vision, objectives, and goals for long-term sustainability of the Joplin Historical & Mineral Museum. Proposals should include a strong emphasis on creative, strategic approaches and a strong public participation component. The Joplin Historical & Mineral Museum is looking to define the strategic steps needed to position itself as a vibrant and essential presence in the City of Joplin, and the surrounding communities going forward into the future. A deliverable for this project will include a visual representation of the plan and strategic steps in a simple, visual format.

All proposals should clearly define how the contractor will work with the Museum to lead a comprehensive planning process, emphasizing a strong public participation component and key stakeholders.

1.2 Background

The Joplin History & Mineral Museum has been an educational cornerstone since its establishment in 1931. The museum is a vital learning center that provides educational programming for all levels of science and history students, as well as visitors of all ages.

Opening to the public in 1931, the Joplin Historical & Mineral Museum is among the oldest museums in the state of Missouri. Originally housed in an abandoned concession stand in Joplin's Electric (now Schifferdecker) Park, the Joplin Museum has been a landmark institution for over 90 years. The original building lacked access to its second floor, other than an exterior ladder. Named the Tri-State Mineral Museum, it hosted an impressive collection of area minerals from the thriving mining industry. This array of unique minerals remains a core part of the museum's collections, drawing visitors and scholars of geology from across the globe. In 1970, the Mineral Museum received its first major upgrade. New custom-built cases, hand lettered labels, heating and air-conditioning, lighting, second floor access, a new brick façade, and new interior wall gave a much-needed facelift to the structure and set the basic footprint of the Mineral Museum that it still occupies today.

In January of 1976, the 5,000 square foot addition of the Dorothea B. Hoover History Museum opened to the public. Focusing on the history of Joplin and the surrounding area, this addition was operated by a separate entity, the Joplin Historical Society. Even though sharing the same building, the Hoover Museum, and the Mineral Museum were entirely separate entities, with independent hours and volunteer staff.

The Joplin Historical Society, with the assistance of the City of Joplin, financed the addition to the Hoover Museum. A large multi-purpose room, basement storage, meeting room, and hallway gallery were added to the history museum in 1989, giving the museum its current footprint. Each entity remained separate with the meeting room being under control of the Mineral Museum. It was shortly after this addition that the Historical Society hired a professional to act as curator to manage the History Museum and its collection.

In 1997, the Dorothea B. Hoover History Museum and the Tri-State Mineral Museum merged into one organization, the Joplin Historical and Mineral Museum Incorporated. Both original groups were made into advisory boards for the newly created Governing Board. It was at this time that museum acquired a full-time staff of professionals to operate and care for both the history and mineral museums, and their collections. Funding was provided by the Joplin City Council, but the museum and its staff were not part of the City of Joplin. It was during this era that the museum acquired other, smaller museums, into the collections and exhibits.

Additions under the umbrella of the Joplin Historical & Mineral Museum Inc. include the Empire District Retired Employees Museum, the Joplin High School- Rose Bowl Parade exhibit, the Joplin Sports Hall of Fame, and the National Cookie Cutter Collectors Club Museum. The museum also added the Hempen mineral collection, the Boss historical americana collection, The American LaFrance fire engine, and the McBurney doll collection.

The most recent change to the museum was in 2019. The Joplin Historical & Mineral Museum merged with the City of Joplin and was placed within the Parks and Recreation Department. With the operational security of the museum secure, the institution can begin to address the needs of the collections and look toward the future for ways to improve our presence in the community, region, and the museum field.

Today, the museum serves the region through its exhibits and programming. The museum draws upon a large and varied collection, which includes one of the finest collections of Tri-State minerals found in the world. These collections are used to explore a wide range of topics and inclusive local stories. The Joplin Museum is the area's premier non-traditional educational facility for both earth science and history. Our exhibits and programs focus on connecting visitors of all ages with our area's rich history, unique mineralogy, and our place in the regional, national, and world scene.

1.3 Study Requirements

The study will evaluate and answer the following items:

Community

- What does the Museum have to do to “delight and engage” community members?
- How do our primary and secondary stakeholders define success for the Museum? How will they measure it? What are their expectations?
- Is the Museum seen as an asset to the community and its quality of life? If not, why not?
- What are the obstacles the Museum faces within the community?

Audience Building

- Who are the Museum's present customers? How are they similar/dissimilar?
- Based on population and market trends, who/what groups should we be targeting?
- How many people should the Museum expect to serve now and into the future?
- Do our admission policies affect our ability to attract visitors?
- What are strategies for attracting, increasing, and sustaining visitation?
- What are the opportunities to expand collaborative partnerships as a strategy for growing audience and community support?
- Who/what does the Museum/its program compete with?
- What do the Museum's visitors think the Museum does best?

Mission

- Does the Museum's mission and/or vision need to change in order to better serve the community?
- Should the mission encompass science and history? What are the costs to encompass both? What are the opportunities? As a follow-up, how is the Museum currently doing in addressing both topics?

Collections, Exhibits, Programs, & Facilities

- How can the Museum leverage the content it creates (exhibits & programs) ...
 - To increase participation by target groups.
 - To reimagine and repackage itself to reach a broader audience, build its reputation and maximize the visitor experience?
- How can the Museum leverage its collection to increase community participation?
- Does our current location impact our ability to reach our potential? If yes, what are the solutions?
- How should the current facilities be utilized to maximize service to the community? What are the Museum's future space needs?

Staffing

- What do we have to be good at, to be successful?
- Is the Museum and its staff capable of reaching its vision? If not, why not? What do we need or need to do differently?
- What is the capacity of the current staff and resources and how would staffing and resources change to accommodate a recommended strategic plan?
