

On June 3, 1916, Reserve Officer Louis S. Wells came upon some men loitering in the Kansas City bottoms. After questioning them, he began to search them. As he was doing so, one of the men, Wibur Mason, ran away. Officer Louis chased him for about 100 yards when Mason stopped and turned around as if to give up. Instead, Mason pulled a gun and shot Officer Louis who died moments later.